VOLUNTEER HELP NEEDED ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

Actual experience as a Friendly Visitor of the Associated Charities, with hread and hutter questions as they effect an Italian ditch-digger, who is perhaps struggling to support a family of five children on a weekly wage of $24.00, makes "Economics" tremendously real and also casts illuminating side-lights on questions of nutrition, housing and the high cost of overalls. Not only to young women who may wish to make social work their profession or desire to serve their community in modern ways, but to all who are eager to reap as rich a harvest as possible from their college courses, should the opportunity to enlist as a Friendly Visitor in the Associated Charities make potent appeal.

ALL COLLEGE PICTURE

For the first time in the history of Wellesley, a picture of the entire college was taken on Tower Court Hill, Monday morning. Mr. Young of Evanston, who takes many college photographs, offered, during the summer to take this one. It is very prohable that the finished picture will he used during the Wellesley campaign.

Undergraduates who can pledge four hours a week throughout the college year for volunteer work are urged to make such a pledge early in the season. Seniors are invited to learn what this field may offer them in the way of professional opportunity after graduation. ..Graduates are offered the opportunity to join the study class as well as to do practical work under trained leaders, during which not only causes and treatment of family difficulties, hut the underlying community problems are made clear. Instructors and Professors in Sociology are asked to avail themselves of the resources which the Associated Charities of Boston provides as a well-equipped lahoratory for field study. Apply to:

RECEPTION FOR 1921 IN BARN

To substantiate the welcome which '24 received during its first week in college the freshmen were again greeted at the reception and dance given in their honor by the Barnswallows, Saturday, October 2nd. The college turned out in its annual fall display of new evening dresses to do justice to the occasion. The upperclassmen tried to impress the fact that Wellesley's method of showing affection to her freshmen is to push them into as large a crowd as possible, and to teach them their A. B. C's. by dashing violently from one letter to another.

Aided by Miss Tufts and Miss Bennett in the afternoon and Miss Pendleton and Miss Waite in the evening, the officers of Barnswallows, Laura Chandler, Mary Pringle Barrett, Nora Cleveland and Ernestine Weidenbach, greeted 1924.

The receiving line stood on the stage where a large yellow moon and black swallows stood out on a background of blue. The posts were wound with yellow on which were black harn-swallows.

It was as though one of these birds had come to life when Marjorie Walsh, who will he remembered always as the graceful little princess, '23's Freshman Tree-Day Mistress, was followed hy the spotlight down the aisle which the crowd made for her. Embodying the spirit of all the Barnswallows, her dance was gay and carefree, but with a suggestion of warmth and friendship in the grey and bleak folds of her wings. Janet Smith '23, also a dancer in last year's Tree-Day, entertained the audience by a beautiful toe-dance in a hutterfly costume.

The music by four Harvard men, was of almost unprecedented success. It was loud and thoroughly raggy. The drummer enjoyed himself between dances hy playing a game of forfeits —holding up all kinds of lost articles and calling for their owners.

Miss Pendleton gave the freshmen a gleam of hope when she predicted that they would live to use the Student-Alumnae Building whose dance floor would eliminate the crowded conditions of the Barn. Miss Waite reminded the listening students that a millenium can come only when the charms of the woman of yesterday are combined with the powers of the woman of today.

Laura Chandler, in greeting '24 did more than merely hid them welcome. She told them a story, made an appeal, and made a wish. The story was the history of the Barn, the appeal was for co-operation with the new Barn plan, and the wish was that each freshmen go home and say she had had a "glorious time."

WAYS AND MEANS

This year the dollar sign is having a new significance at college. Among the many startling expenses no one, unless she be indeed a favorite of the little gold god, can be entirely free from financial worry. Constantly there is talk, talk, talk about the High Cost of a College Education: yet, strange to say, the most convenient source of remedy, the Self Help department of the Christian Association, is almost entirely neglected.

In the Christian Association office Miss Conant is daily receiving requests for girls to do a small amount of housework, to tend children, to do cooking or dish-washing, to tutor, to play the piano, and even one fascinating opportunity to do scout work. And yet, only a few girls have signified their willingness to take such positions, or indeed to take positions of any kind. Those who are working their way through college are usually fully aware of all the opportunities for earning extra money: but they cannot, by any means, take care of all the work to be done, and the great mass of students seem not to realize or to appreciate that here, through the Christian Association, they have an excellent opportunity for earning the multitude of I-want-but-don't-need things which mean so much added enjoyment to the year.

There is work waiting for those who want it, and surely such an opportunity is not one to be lightly disregarded.

THE FREE PRESS COLUMN

In every regular issue of the Wellesley College News this space is devoted to the expression of the opinion of our readers on any subject of interest to the college public. For Wellesley's best development, an expression of varied opinions, those of the youngest freshmen, of the most experienced alumnae, of members of the faculty as well as of students of the upper classes, is very much desired. Views on all subjects, from the time-honored "Spare the Grass" to the latest criticism of Wellesley's stand in the presidential election, are here made welcome.

Contributions for this column, as well as all other contributions, should be sent to the office of the News in the Chapel Basement by noon on Saturday. Some few important communications can be accepted for publication if received before 8.00 A. M. on Monday. All contributions must be signed with the author's full name, and with the signature under which they are to appear in the News.

DOWN WITH THE QUESTION MARK!

In spite of the fact that there exist some members of the human race for whom the acquisition of intelligence is an utter impossibility; nevertheless, it has been proven that even these unfortunates possess the capability of simulating intelligence. That is why I urge that those few students of Wellesley who refuse to develop this capability, should be made to do so. If they cannot be sensible and discriminating, let them at least cultivate an accurate imitation of a sensible and discriminating person.

By so doing they will eliminate the irrelevant question, and so produce a decided improvement in the college class rooms.

One who makes a habit of attending classes needs no introduction to the irrelevant question , or its author. Both appear as regularly as schedule cards, and are equally welcome. Their questions (which are as many as the stars in the Heavens) have four main groups. There are the questions about onesself. There are the questions about the instructor, whose life holds no point too sacred to escape the searchers after knowledge. There are the questions on the course, its preparation and lack of the same, which occasionally sink to the level of inquiry as to the color of ink best suited for written assignment. And last but not least, we have the all-inclusive irrelevancies which treat "the world and all that lies therein" in their scope. There is no limit to these questions, any one of which would cause an information bureau to close in shame.

Now altho there are countless maxims encouraging questioning as to the true path to knowledge, nevertheless the unintelligent question can be little better than a stumbling block which impedes that path. For it is a source of poignant irritation, both to instructor and to student. It occupies time which might far better be devoted to the subject at hand. It demoralizes the class which loses interest when the lines of thought are broken and delayed by fruitless inquiry. Even the instructor is disturbed by a flopping hand and a foolish tongue.

It seems significant that the chronic questioners in Wellesley have become as famous as profficient exasperations. So we beg of them that if they are not sufficiently intelligent to desist from their questioning, that they will at least attempt to emulate their intelligent sisters who preserve a golden silence rather than perpetuate irrelevant inquiries.

D. A. M. '22.

WHY?

Why, oh why, I lamented, as I stood in line while the minutes crept from nine to eleven, why do we tolerate the present schedule system at Wellesley? Over half the student body forms into one long straggling weary line leading to the door of the schedule officers. Rush as fast as one may after first chapel service, with some over one thousand girls rushing for the same line, inevitably the line lengthens rapidly.

Under the present system, two classes of girls form the line: first, those who can't find a friend ahead who will flourish their receipts before the schedule offices in their stead; second, those who consider it unfair to send their receipts in ahead of others who stand in the line. Oftentimes girls hold as many as eight or ten receipts when they near the official doorway. No wonder the line moves slowly!

The system is wasteful of time and strength. To put it mildly, one tires, of standing still in a stuffy, crowded corridor hour after hour, with incessant chatter and babel on every side. Not only physical but mental weariness results. Then there is anxiety lest, when one gets almost in front of the door, the schedule officer, who naturally becomes weary herself, will say "No more schedules" and close the door in one's face at ten promptly!

Patterned upon a vice of the present system comes the following suggestion. One girl from each house or large group might collect receipts and take upon herself the responsibility of obtaining and distributing the schedule cards, in return for which each girl would be only too glad to pay a few pence! But, in my opinion, a thoroughly practicable system similar to that used for freshmen schedules but on a larger scale could be imitated. Surely there are enough rooms in the "Ad" building and Founders Hall that lines could be formed under the various initials. This would mean an incalculable economy of time and strength for all concerned. If the office force is insufficient for such a system, undoubtedly recruits from the student body would be available.

If the present system prevails in the future, as the college increases in number the Bookstore may find it good business to invest in a supply of campstools to cheer the weary waiters.

HEART OR HEAD?

1922, 1923, you are choosing, or about to choose, the leaders of your class for this new year ahead. You are about to entrust to a few of your number the honor, the great privilege, and the by no means easy task of representating you in Wellesley's every phase of life and activity. How are you, individually and collectively, prepared to meet this responsibility?

Leadership of a large college class involves and demands girls of no ordinary stamp; remember this. Classes as large as those at Wellesley must—and do—of necessity divide into congenial, perhaps unconsciously geographical groups. They are "split up" into this "bunch" and that. As classes they assemble on occasions only. Academically they rate '21, '22, '23,and '24 etc. All very true.

But underlying all this, 1922 and 1923, you are two bands of fellow-workers, two miniature student-armies, as it were, with one or two years of common service behind you, as the case may be. During this time you have seen action together, faced trials, shared hardships. You have grown to know your "buddies;" you have seen them stand or fall under circumstance's fire. You've another year's enlistment to provide for now; the time has come for you to choose your leaders for a new and freshly-chartered expedition. Are you big enough, are you honest enough to choose correctly? Weigh carefully in your judgment the girl of your choice; measure her, not by the criterion of your affection, but by that of the need of the whole "fighting force." It will be your duty, '22 and '23, to stand behind the captain you will choose. Don't let your heart outweigh your head. Is it to be your best friend, or the best friend of the Class? Consider this, and you will send your armies forth, triumphant, banners flying, to this new year of campaign.

1922.

WHAT YOU DID

Last fall every one of you who were here gave something toward Wellesley's Service Fund, without realizing, perhaps, how much real need there was for your money, or how widespread would be its use. From different parts of the world expressions of thanks have come for the help which, thru your interest and contribution, Wellesley has been able to give. Perhaps you have heard less from the institutions in this country than from those abroad.

Upon receiving an extra donation from the Wellesley Service Fund "Aunt Dinah" writes from her negro-school in Georgia, "Our meal and flour barrels are both empty today, and to think that I can pay cash for more is a great joy." Wellesley's check usually reaches "Aunt Dinah" in answer to a prayer, she says.

From New York Miss Maud Booth sends "a thousand thanks" for the "token of practical sympathy" which the Wellesley Service Fund sent her.

A growing college in Montana, Billings Polytechnic Institute, appreciates Wellesley's gift of twenty dollars: "You will understand the great value of your help when we tell you that it was only in the last hours of the last day of the campaign that our Fund (for $100,000) was completed. Every dollar had to be counted to save the conditional pledges."

Wellesley was able to send an additional hundred dollars, besides its yearly donation, to the Hindman Settlement Schol in the Kentucky Mountains, which enabled a special scholarship student to enter the school. Miss May Stone writes, "One hundred dollars is a big contribution when compared with the average gift, and we are always encouraged to be so generously assisted."

"An extra hundred dollars from Wellesley makes us wish we had a brass band to sound some notes of rejoicing," Mrs. Esther de Long Zande seemed pleased when enough money was saved from the Service Fund so that an extra donation could be sent to the Pine Mountain Settlement School in Kentucky.

From the Child Labor Committee Miss Ella G. Wolfe writes, "It is hard to tell you how grateful we are for your very generous contribution at this time. It means that the work we planned for the coming year will be possible."

Last year your generosity gave Wellesley a chance to do a great deal of real service, and to spread its good work over a large field. The responsibility for the continuance of such timely help lies with YOU, new members of Wellesley and old members of Wellesley. Remember this when the Wellesley Service Fund is mentioned.

EXCHANGES

Princeton's first mass meeting for football held last Friday night was the most enthusiastic demonstration that has taken place there in several years.

While our freshmen were going through the experiences of posture tests, dances, and receiving lines last week, Goucher was indulging in hazing.

New York University, with an enrollment of 11,237 students, is now the largest university in the United States. There are at present ten institutions of learning in America which have an enrollment of six thousand or more.

Cornell has limited the number of women students in the university to one thousand.

The class of 1857 has subscribed the largest class percentage to the Harvard Endowment Fund.

Inspiration

In Chandler & Co.'s

Misses' Suits

Styles in Chandler & Co.'s Suits created by French designers inspired by the wonderful coats portrayed in paintings by old masters in the Louvre

INSPIRATION is the very word. The "beaux" of olden times used to array themselves in wonderful suits. And the French designers of the new suits for misses evidently caught inspiraiion from the charming styles seen in paintings by old masters of the Louvre. The nobles and great men of the French courts in the romantic days knew how to dress with elegance and grace. They knew the right fold of a collar, the proper slope of a waistline, the graceful drape and correct length of the coat. These were matters of first importance. But nowadays, the young woman is the one who is particular about the lines and effects in her suits. A miss does not find it necessary to be conservative—her idea is to have the latest, the most becoming and fascinating effects in her suits. And her view of what is becoming and fascinating agrees strikingly with that of the noble dressers of the French courts two centuries ago. So the French designers went to the Louvre for inspiration and Chandler & Co. went to the Paris models for inspiration for their Misses' Suits.

It is well to have the most stylish and ultra fashionable ideas represented in a showing of Misses' Suits. But that is not enough. There should be associated the question of reasonable price.

HELPFUL HINTS

We firmly believe that now is the time our new students should become familiar with Wellesley quizzes. We therefore submit these models to aid them at crucial moments.

A. English Literature.

1. Why do you prefer Beowulf to This Side of Paradise?

2. Give a complete outline of the dramatic works of William Shakespeare. Compare them with The Education of Henry Adams?

3. Do you consider Chaucer to be an example of good literature? If so, trace his influence upon the works of Rupert Hughes.

B. English Composition.

1. Write an expository theme on soviet government. Would you like it at Wellesley?

2. Discuss. in narrative form?

a. The three greatest events in history.

b. The League of Nations.

C. Zoology.

1. Write a letter to Uncle Toby telling him what you have learned in your zoology course at college.

2. Do you consider this a fair question?

D. Mathematics

1. If it takes three seniors and four juniors half-an-hour to walk to the village, how long will it take the freshmen to consume eight hot dogs on the way from Natick to Wellesley? Carry to the nth degree.

2. Given Miss Coombs' Tea Room and four hundred freshmen. Construct a graph showing the number of pounds gained or lost by Christmas vacation.

3. How long will it take a freshman leaving a campus house at 9.45, to reach her dormitory by a quarter of ten? Policeman's aid not to be solicited in this case.

E. Hygiene.

1. Why is a calory?

2. Are golashes hygienic?

3. Without the heart and lungs we could not live. Comment upon this statement.

To those receiving one hundred percent or more in these quizzes, the joint Chairman of the Help from the Hopeless Society will give a handsome prize of one dozen barbed wire hairnets (Cap shape).

Signed,
Work Hard and Philip Space, '21.

LINE UPON LINE

I stood in line to register
When I was new one day,
I stood in line for my exam.
At Mary Hemenway.

'Twas lines for Information
And "in line!" for the cashier.
I wonder if we keep this up
All through the college year.

Oh, Wellesley is receiving-lines
And waiting-lines, subscribing-lines
Book-buying lines, and scedule-lines
Anl lines for everything.

I think I've met Miss Pendleton
At least a dozen times,
And I am sure I know Miss Tufts
Outside receiving-lines
I've met the presidents of C. A.,
C. G. and A.A. too,
I've bought the News and Magazine,
I've seen some lines there too.

For Wellesley is receiving-lines,
And waiting-lines, subscribing-lines,
Book-buying-lines and schedule-lines,
And lines of type for you.

FOOT-NOTE TO FUTURE FRESHMEN

Reflections concerning Barnswallows' Reception

1. 7.15 P. M.

My Seniorite is truly sweet
To let me meet the great elite.
My old pumps they are obsolete,
So fasten I upon my feet
My silver slippers new and neat.
And now my costume is complete,
I hie me forth to greet the street
Where I'm to meet my Seniorite.

11. 10.15 P. M.

At last I greet my luscious sheet
With pulse abeat and aching feet
And with deceit I must secrete
From all, my anguish of de-feet.
A night replete with feet concrete
And fearful heat that can't be beat
When every seat is obsolete
And you must treat all those you meet
With language sweet and phrases neat
Is not the meaning of a treat.
And what though swallows may be fleet,
I'd rather they would be discreet
And not compete to squash my feet,
For I am not an Athalete.

111. Moral

Of coming Freshmen I entreat
That if a crafty Seniorite
This invitation should repeat
Though she would treat of food to eat
And of elite that you will meet,
Fill not thy brain with vain conceit!

CONSIDER FIRST THY TENDER FEET.

PREPARING FOR LIFE

Sunday morning, October third, in the Memorial Chapel, Dr. J. W. Platner of Cambridge preached on the necessity of preparation for the obstacles that this year is bound to bring. It is not enough to live in the present. The realization that life is never-ending furnishes what Dr. Platner called "the prophetic value of unfinished nature."

He named the chief enemies that must be met, and the best weapons for defeating them. Sound knowledge, that is based on a realization of the limits of knowledge, and artistic sensibility, alone can conqueer ignorance. Moral indifference must be met with moral purpose. Finally, religious faith is a fundamental part of anyone's life equipment. "It was by faith and it always will be by faith that men are moral victors."

ARTHUR BYRON & MARTHA HEDMAN in "TRANSPLANTING JEAN"

"Transplanting Jean," a gay and sparkling comedy, will come to the Hollis Street Theatre beginning Monday, October 4. Arthur Byron and Martha Hedman will appear as co-stars in this comedy triumph by de Flers and de Cavaillet, master craftsmen of the French stage.

"Transplanting Jean" electrified all Paris when it was first disclosed at the Theatre Gymnase, and ran for fifteen months. The American production made at Chicago, last August, has met with a very real success. All records for summer business have been broken.

Arthur Byron has the role of Le Comte de Larzac, a middle-aged Don Juan, who finds at the age of forty-two that he has exhausted most of the pleasurable sensations that life has to offer. A young woman laughs at his first gray hairs, and he renounces all women for all time. He determines henceforth to cultivate the simpler emotions, and he remembers that he has a natural son whom he has not seen for twenty years. A meeting with this youth (Richard Barbee) offers his jaded senses the prospect of a new sensation. The boy has been reared on a farm in Spain at the foothills of the Pyrenees and is a healthy sportsman, an athlete and out-of-doors type. How sire and son come together in Paris, and again in this country, how two such contrary natures come to an inevitable clash, how the debonair parent falls in love with his son's fiancee (Martha Hedman) is all piquantly set forth in true Gallic fashion and with a prodigality of French wit.

In producing this comedy, Messrs. Byron and Marshall have adhered to a literal translation of the author's work and are said to have shown a wise daring—a daring that justified the deserved success they have won.

Elizabeth Lum, 1922, has announced her engagement to Ervin Thayer Drake Jr. of Franklin, N. H., Harvard 1916.

EVENING CHAPEL

At Sunday evening Chapel Miss Ruth W. Lathrop '83 gave personal reminiscences of Mr. and Mrs. Durant and of the college life during Mr. Durant's life-time. Wellesley was founded by Mr. Durant in 1879 as a memorial to his son, who died in 1873. While, at first glance, a college for women may seem a strange memorial to raise to a young man's memory, it is not so when we understand how interested the Durants were in the higher education of women. They saw that the teaching of the country was passing into the hands of women, and that only one-fifth as many girls as men were given opportunities for education. Wellesley was founded as a Christian educational institution. Mr. Durant deeded the estate to the trustees, and he himself erected a building with excellent equipment—College Hall. But he gave to the college something more than material equipment. He gave in addition his ideals, the Christian, the academic, and the feminine.

Miss Lathrop then gave a word picture of Mr. and Mrs. Durant as she remembered them. They were friends of all the girls who were there in college giving freely of their time and personality to all who sought it. Mr. Durant gave financial assistance to many girls who, without it could not have come to college, and was the founder of our Student Aid Society. In the autumn of 1881 he was taken seriously ill, and on the thirtieth of October he died. There were many who thought then that the heart of Wellesley itself had ceased, but Mrs. Durant assumed two-fold responsibility and carried on the work of her husband. On February twelfth, 1917, Mrs. Durant died. From then on the ideals of the college. New buildings have been erected, departments reorganized, and the academic standard raised. Miss Lathrop paid an especial tribute to our own president, Miss Pendleton. She then gave a brief summary of the fields of work now open to Wellesley graduates, and closed her address with personal reminiscences of the college life in '83.
